ABSTRACT

Geriatric patients often suffer from multimorbidity, polypharmacy and are usually frequently hospitalized due to drug-related problems. Health status of older adults can be substantially modified by successful compensation of disorders, various interventions (pharmacological, non-pharmacological) and sufficient professional support. Quality care for complex older adults requires interdisciplinary cooperation of various healthcare professionals across different settings of care and substantial is the role of geriatricians (experts in complex geriatric clinical assessments and specific geriatric interventions), clinical pharmacists (experts in complex medication reviews and pharmacotherapy risks/benefits) and other pharmacists providing drug information, medication adherence support, self-monitoring support etc.

This Symposium will introduce achievements of geriatrics and clinical pharmacy in the Czech Republic in interprofessional cooperation and care for geriatric patients during past 20 years (in education, clinical practice and research). Practical experience of clinical pharmacists, geriatricians, palliative care physicians and general practitioners in interprofessional cooperation for geriatric patients will be shared during this symposium. All physicians of various specialties, clinical pharmacists and other pharmacists are cordially invited!

The symposium is organized in cooperation with Czech professional platforms of clinical pharmacy, Czech Geriatric and Gerontological Society of the Czech Medical Association J.B. Purkyně and with participation of representatives of general practitioners and physicians in palliative care. Symposium is held in the Czech language and simultaneously translated into English.
